FIBREFILL II SLEEPING BAGS

(Condensed from F.M.C. Bulletin and Mountain Safety Newsletter).

A series of tests of sleeping bags insulated with a silicone treated Dacron filler called Fibrefill II is being carried out, following various appraisals overseas. This type of insulation has only recently been introduced to the New Zealand mountain scene, but is gaining an increasing acceptance.

Where wet conditions are likely to be encountered - e.g., in snow caves, gorge trips and winter camping - a Fibrefill II bag is likely to be more useful... The Fibrefill II bag does not collapse when wet, and does not hold much water. It can be wrung out and dried quickly and retains its insulation to a large degree. Padded climbing jackets insulated with Fibrefill are superior in damp conditions.

LOGGING OF NATIVE TREES

The recent Government decision to log South Okarito, the Paparoas and Mariaua, and to cut the heart out of Whirinaki, has demonstrated once again the unbelievable short term policies of the Minister of Forests and his department. Why is it, that the lessons from so many previously forested countries to learn from, New Zealand continues to plunder the remnants of its forest heritage?

These forests are of the highest quality and importance and 1979 will be the last chance to gain legal protection and recognition for them, before they are squandered and fragmented by selective logging. Once they are logged their value will be lost, and their ecosystems will be destroyed or distorted.

Your feelings are important so make them known. Can you write letters to the Editors of newspapers, Members of Parliament etc.?

PAST EVENTS

20th May NGAMOKO RANGE

On Sunday five trampers set off for the day to Ngamoko range, which had recently been dressed with the first of its winter snow.

Toka peak was reached via Knights track. From there the party waded and crunched off along the white ranges for Tunipo. This was reached after a three up and two down climbing session which resembled a spider's scramble up a bath tub. After Tunipo we returned via Heritage Lodge, to be out and home for tea.

Trampers were Nick Bishop, Terry Crippin, Peter Daragh, Colin Hoare and Stephen Moore.

ABEL TASMAN NATIONAL PARK - EASTER TRIP

Participants: Bud Cade, Julie Cade, John Carter, Sarah Godfrey, Gary McKay, Jenny Smith.

Thursday, 12th April

On a very wet Thursday night five of the party travelled by Newman's bus and then ferry to Picton. We were met by John who drove us to a roadside camping spot just short of Nelson.

Friday, 13th April

Dawned a greyish overcast day. John drove us to the start of the track at Marahau (Sandfly Bay) and we set off for our first day of tramping on the track to Torrent Bay. The weather still uncertain we tramped through regenerating native bush with lovely views of the coastline and sea. We spent the night on the floor in a crowded Torrent Bay Hut.

Saturday, 14th April

We woke up to a fine, clear morning - an indication of the perfect weather we were to have for the rest of the trip. In high spirits we set out along the track skirting the Torrent Bay Estuary (crossable at low tide). In the early morning we passed through Torrent Bay consisting of a collection of mainly holiday homes. We continued on to Little Bark Bay where we had lunch and a refreshing swim in the clear water. A short dingily trip was laid on for us courtesy of two boys staying at the bay. Reluctantly we left and carried on through Bark Bay and then on to Tonga Quarry where camp was set up on the beach. Some friends from the Torrent Bay Hut joined us for a pleasant chat a round our roaring fire. Being a full moon we had a lovely night-time view of Tonga Island and the wide stretching coastline from our camp. Pleasantly tired we settled down for the night - not, however, until John's legendary pillow and his moccasins entertained us with a succession of disappearing and reappearing acts.

Sunday, 15th April

We woke to a beautiful sunrise over Tonga Island. Eventually, everyone emerged from their sleeping bags and a most enjoyable morning was spent relaxing on the beach. We visited a cave that contained some Maori carvings. Gary spent his time attempting to catch fish. The females of the party tried to better the males in their surf casting abilities with debatable success. After our warm lazy morning we decided we had better move on. So in the afternoon we set off back along the track to Bark Bay and Sandfly Bay. We then dropped down into Frenchman's Bay where we spent the night. Frenchman's Bay is a tidal estuary with very little fresh water.

Monday, 16th April

After a short discussion we decided to walk around the coastline to Torrent Bay. Not very long after that we found ourselves bushbashing up a steep hill (due to the high tide). We dropped down into a bay where another attempt was made at coastline travel. Various hilarious methods were devised by the men to keep the weaker sexes' feet dry some of which worked and again we found ourselves bushbashing up a steep hill. Finally we dropped down into Boundary Bay where we were directed onto a track that took us to Torrent Bay. Lunch was had at Torrent Bay where an attempt was made to duck Bud Cade for his repeated use of a certain word. We all enjoyed a swim and paddle then headed off again for the road end. Steady tramping and a good variety of songs saw us at the car again before darkness finally descended. John then drove us to Ruby Bay where we camped the night.

Tuesday, 17th April

Another lovely sunrise welcomed us as we woke up and after a quick tidy up we left for Picton. Arriving half an hour before the ferry left we had time for a quick meal. We were all sad to have to say goodbye to John and the South Island but we had pleasant memories of a trip enjoyed by all to take back with us to Palmerston North.

For those interested in tramping in the Abel Tasman National Park the tracks are well marked and an easy grade with little climbing involved.

Beautiful coastline views are to be had and the huts are usually within 3 - 4 hours tramping distance of each other. Many good camping spots are to be found along the track especially near the beaches.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY WEEKEND "RUAHINES IN THE RAIN"

On Saturday morning a Morris 1100 set forth through the falling rain for the Northern Ruahines. The intention of its occupants was to cross the range from the east and visit Lake Colenso, deep in the Ruahine forest.

Plans started well, with Top Maropea Hut being reached for an early lunch. Then after dropping down into the swollen tributaries of the Maropea it soon became obvious that river travel would have its hazards. So we returned to Maropea Hut to share its comforts with six members of the Heretaunga Club. The following morning we went south down the range to Waipawa saddle and then west through to Waterfall Hut in the Kawhatau valley. The upper Kawhatau must rate as one of the prettiest valleys in the Ruahines, and just to reward us Huey lifted the clouds to reveal the green bushy ridges and white snowy peaks of the Hikurangi range.

Next morning, after consulting the logbook, we decided to make our exit by bashing up broken ridge, through the frosted forests and out into the tussock and cloud. Along the tops we reached Rangiateatua and continued to the Three Johns. From there we dropped down to the Waipawa saddle and into the Waipawa river to the road end.

Trip members; were Nick Bishop, Terry Crippin, Colin Hoare.

2nd June COPPERMINE CREEK

The sky was wet, the air was wet, the grass was wet, the rocks were wet, the river was wet, we were wet. What more can you say about Coppermine Creek on a wet winter's day? But - little Pollyannas that we are, we enjoyed splashing our way up and down the rocky river and felt refreshed in body and mind when we reached the car in the early afternoon, after going as far as the swollen river would let us and lunching in the shelter of the hut.

Trip members were Glen Osborne, Lynette Nicholls, Sheryl Sporry, Frances Trewby, and Heather Crabb.
