Departs: 8am

27th September – PNTMC – MUAC Debate

The annual debate against MUAC, an evening of humour and wit. The large number of enthusiastic contenders for the team means a play off to get the best people, BUT don't let that stop you from putting your name forward – Just kidding, we actually still need a team. Give John a call if you would like to partake or know a club member that can be persuaded.

Organiser: John Wright Ph 82041

Venue: Massey University

NOTE: The debate is being held on Tuesday so there will be no club night on Thursday 29th.

THANK YOU:

Thanks go to those people who have so willingly given talks recently. There is plenty of opportunity for club members to show slides of some of the more unusual trips, or rarely visited place, they have been to recently.

TRIP REPORTS

North Egmont – Holly Hut (ANZAC Weekend)

This weekend, using combined transport, both an easy and a medium trip to Mt Taranaki was possible. The medium group took the round the mountain track whilst Ann and I went to North Egmont with the intention of meeting with the other group on the second night at Holly Hut.

There is a new track that sidles up through the forest to an equally new and large hut (18 bunks), called the Makawtawa Hut. This walk takes about an hour. It was a brilliantly fine day and we had views of Mt Taranaki against a deep blue sky. Unfortunately this weather was not to last, the clouds gathered overnight and the mountain stayed under clag for the remainder of the weekend. Next day we climbed the Puffer to the TV repeater then followed the round the mountain track past Tahurangi Lodge and onto Holly Hut, approximately 5 hours. Having arrived we then took a walk to Bells Falls, pretty and well worth a side trip.

Back at Holly Hut the medium group now had arrived. The next day the easy group, now numbering four, returned to North Egmont via the Kakawai Track crossing over Ram Stream on a short 3-wire bridge and then walking the Veronica Track to the car park.

We were: Tricia Eder, Anne Young, Anne Kathi, Anne Christine.

Harris Creek – 25th June Easy Day Tramp

After a latish start with a few extra stops on the way up the winding road, to the Number 1 Dam at Mangahoe, we wandered up the track until we reached the second swing bridge. Here we found a nice sheltered sunny spot, down on the shingle bank where we lunched, and from whence we then ventured to the car park. The Dam was full and for a time we watched the water spraying forth through the open gates. Phil's medium group arrived down and having exchanged pleasantries we returned home.

We were: Sally Hewson, Tricia Eder, Anne young.

"THE STORM"

by Tony Gates

The last weekend of July saw six optimistic mountaineers battling a storm on Fanthams Peak, M.E.N.P.. Despite a poor weather forecast Trevor Bissell, Bruce Barnes, Greg Reid, Mark Bown and Alan Mountford joined me, and we climbed absolutely nothing. We were all prepared, but could go no further than Syme Hut. The weather was so bad it wasn't easy venturing out to the toilet!

We managed a pre-dawn start on Saturday, aiming to reach the hut by lunchtime. It is an easy 3 hour climb to the hut, but the deteriorating weather slowed us down. The route isn't difficult to follow until nearing the summit of Fanthams Peak where both the old and new Syme Huts may be difficult to locate in weather such as we experienced. There exists a few marker poles, but most were almost completely buried by ice. The hut too, was encased in ice, but at least not buried by snow (as the old hut often was). Its shelter was very welcome. Obviously, there was no climbing to be done, so some of us visited the rather dilapidated old Syme Hut, shortly to be removed. The New Syme Hut is obviously popular with the locals, and is apparently an amazing place to stay in fine weather. Not for us though, so we could only chin-wag, eat, drink, and sleep.

Sunday, and the storm continued, so we retreated to by home by midday. I, for one, will return.

( Rumour has it that Tony had difficulty finding the hut after visiting the little house. Fortunately a lamp was set up to guide the other relieved members of the party back to the warmth of the hut – Ed.)

22-24th July – Snowcraft II – Blyth Hut

Super spy Phil (his name is secret) warned that the Parawai Club from Waekanae and Ruamati were also holding a snowcraft course from Blythe Hut south of the Ohakune Mountain Road. So, tents were added to the huge pile of ice axes, snowstakes, crampons, ropes, hammers, etc. that was crammed into vehicles; because of the hideous load the tents were left in the cars to be collected on Saturday night if required; it was not necessary as we got to the hut first at around 11:30 pm. We had seen snow on Girdlestone Peak by moonlight and had hopes for a good day on the morrow.

Saturday was windy and misty but the show had to go on so people were divided among instructors, given notes and gear and all set off bravely up the ridge from the hut. Full storm gear and some body strength were required to make one's way against the wind without freezing to death or being blown over; eventually a sheltered valley was found with some snow in it. Half a day's self arresting, step cutting and rope work followed but by lunch time people's thoughts were mostly about how nice it would be to be dry and warm and everyone retreated to the hut.

The large Parawai group were at the hut on our return; we offered to go and fetch our tents so that part of both groups could sleep outside but they had already decided to stay at the Mangaehuehu Hut further around the around-the-mountain track. After lunch we practiced setting up belays by tying ourselves to the furniture.

Quite a gale blew in the night. By morning the wind had dropped but quite steady rain had begun; hence we packed up, cleaned up and came home.

Instructors: Trevor Bissell, Phil Clerke, Catherine Farquhar, Barry Scott and John Wright.

Pupils: Mark Bown, John Drury, Tricia Eder, Kerry Ford, Sarah Fyfe, Steve Glasgow, Nevil Kennedy, Ian Kirker, Mike McConachy, Greg Reid and Mark Townsend.
